

Freshman Day Student Breaks Mold

by David Fronczak

Defying set norms and pursuing her interests with a firm resolve, student Stephenie Maile is a unique and intriguing personality. She has a light in her eye which guides her toward the future. She is both a senior at Holy Angels Academy in Buffalo, and a member of the freshman class here at Canisius.

Stephanie is a well educated and disciplined student, currently working on a dual major in Bio-Chemistry and Philosophy. She has plans to attend Johns Hopkins Medical School after leaving Canisius. To fulfill her high school requirements, she is taking a marriage counseling class at Holy Angels.

She'll be completing her freshman year at Canisius in May. Her graduation from high school will take place this June. Thus, she is a senior in high school and a freshman in college at the present time. She has a dual major and a dual education, (at least for this year). Stephanie said, "It was a challenge of my abilities to attend school in this fashion."

To develop on canvas the charismatic qualities she owns would be a dare to the artist. She is a good-humored and above all, a captivating person. A young lady who is both ambitious and vibrant. Stephanie's eyes are definitely shining towards the future.

She works and socializes with friends and faculty with the utmost confidence. Swimming, skiing and debating play major roles in her life. Stephanie is currently a member of Academia (the debate club on campus). She is also a member of the Urban Studies group. She enjoys both reading and writing satires and parodies.

When asked about Canisius life, she said, "The atmosphere is more conducive to studying and meeting guys." Obviously Holy Angels Academy couldn't satisfy the latter. She has numerous male friends who are upperclassmen.

She thoroughly enjoys philosophy and the analogies that philosophers use to express their arguments. The works of Plato are especially interesting to her. Plato speaks of human existence and the art of living; the best musician striking the right note at the right time. Stephanie symposium sessions, etc. would take place.

Within her is the capacity to expand her horizons. She sees the
